09:00-09:10	Opening Remarks Prof. Gary E. Swanson University of Northern Colorado, USA
09:10-09:50	Keynote Speaker Speech 1 Dr. Chin Yee Mun Faculty of Creative Industries, Chairperson for Center for Media and Creative Communcation, University Tunku Abdul Rahman, Malaysia Title: Recent Chinese Malaysians' Political Decision: A Matter of Rational Choice? Abstract: In many multi-ethnic societies, ethnic politics plays an influential role in determining the outcome of elections. However, in these societies, voting decisions may also be influenced by their members' civic consciousness. This paper aims to explore the possibility that in a multi-ethnic society, voting decisions are made based on both ethnic and civic consciousness considerations. A study on Chinese Malaysians' voting decisions was conducted to investigate this phenomenon. Findings from this study show both factors play vital role in shaping Chinese Malaysians voting decision. This reflects the fact that a voter is rational and when he votes he will support any political party that are able to protect his interest be it in the form of ethnic rights or civic rights.

09:50-10:30	Keynote Speaker Speech 2
	Prof. Gary E. Swanson University of Northern Colorado, USA Title: The Impact of Social Media Usage on Interpersonal Communication: Issues, Challenges, and Recommendations Abstract: Over the past decade social media through advances in technology has infused itself in the lives of every young person in the developed world today. The types of social media that we use are ever growing, evolving and changing. The way we communicate has also changed dramatically - moving further away from face-to-face communication. We are now more wired than ever. A recent study at the University of Glasgow found that half of the participants reported checking their email once an hour, while some individuals check up to 30 to 40 times an hour. An AOL study revealed that 59 percent of PDA users check every single time an email arrives and 83 percent check email every day on vacation. The media industry is at a crossroads as it seeks to adapt to new developments in technology in covering and disseminating the news. Our mass media and societal landscapes have been forever altered.

In fact, "living is to communicate" in a sense. The humankind, since his/her species began to live as a social being, has used communication for maintaining his/her liveliness, for sharing what she/he has produced, for transferring some of his/her values, settled opinions, knowledge to the coming generations. "Communication is a requirement that has emerged with the existence of the humankind. Its history begins with the history of humankind. We live in a kind of message web at every moment in a day except for the sleep; ringing of the alarm clock, shoutings of the salesmen, billboards, saying hellos to the people at home, in the school, on the street, turning the heads, maintaining attitudes......"

V10031-Pre.	RE-MAHATHIRISATION of 13th Malaysian General Election Muhamad Takiyuddin Ismail and Ahmad Fauzi Abdul Hamid

Abstract: This article discusses the phenomenon of re-Mahathirisation which engulfed the politics of Malaysia's ruling Barisan Nasional (BN) coalition and its main component party, the United Malays National Organisation (UMNO). Re-Mahathirisation refers to the increase in attachment towards the legacy of Malaysia's fourth Prime Minister, Mahathir Mohamad (1981-2003). The process was seen as approaching a peak with BN-UMNO's campaign for the Thirteenth General Elections (GE13) of May 2013. It was orchestrated especially by conservative elements in UMNO disillusioned with the political liberalisation began by his successor Abdullah Ahmad Badawi (2003-09) and continued by Najib Razak. The successful dislodging of Abdullah Badawi from the party-cum-national leadership in 2009 signified a powerful return of Mahathirism to the foreground of UMNO and national politics. Although Najib has pursued Abdullah's political liberalisation initiatives, he felt compelled to tolerate a rising public presence of Mahathir. In the short term, UMNO as a dominant conservative party has strongly rebuilt its legitimacy as the guardian of the Malay-Islamic agenda ever-circumspect of attempts to reform existing multi-racial power sharing arrangements. However, Mahathir's aligning with right wing Malay conservative groups has countered the gains that could be reaped from Najib's dogged advocacy of political reform. As a consequence, BN managed to retain power by virtue only of the heavy electoral weightage given to rural areas. To non-Malays and middle class Malays, UMNO's resistance to change arguably owes much to its association with Mahathir's recent divisive approach, fear-mongering and unbridled use of conservative rhetoric.

N10014-Pre	Korean Language Phonology Jay-Ar Manuel Igno Abstract: Sounds play a very important role in oral communication. Unlike written language and sign languages, for the spoken language we rely on the medium of sounds that most of us are most likely familiar. As for every language, there is a varied inventory of sounds, would it be phonetic or phonemic. For this research, the sounds of the Korean language will be discussed which is now spoken by about 60, 000 million speakers originated from South and North Korea. Also, Korean language is now being studied by many foreigners as a foreign language, would it be for academic, business, hobby or just merely interest in learning a foreign language. Like every language of the world, studying the Korean language is as equally interesting. Its general features and language specifics are very essential to be known to all learners of this language. And because we believe that we use language to convey our thoughts, it is necessary to identify and make a clear written grammar of each and every language. To address this concern, scholars of language should take part. And as I do my part I will first look at the speech sounds of this language because I also believe that language is conveyed through speech sounds that need to be clear and easily understood. If one fails to clearly pronounce a sound, he also fails to convey communication clearly that leads to miscommunication. So if one wishes to be understood he needs to acquire the proper knowledge of the learnt language especially the way we should pronounce even a single sound.

N10038-pre	Using Facebook to Appreciate Literary Works by Applying Reader Response Approach Rita Inderawati Abstract: This global era challenges all elements to create and innovate for all the matter. Literature as one of t he contestants in urban culture must have high competitiveness in line with multimedia technology p rogress. It is a fact that literature has something to do with old things, but it does not mean that teach ers cannot create innovative things concerning with the use of literature. Meanwhile, the writers of li terary works have published their qualified works which can be utilized in all levels of education. Ir onically, the qualified works were conventionally taught that is by applying the old paradigm. Rosen blatt (1987) cites that it is an efferent stance (scan reading for enjoyment) if structuralism approach i s put forward. There must be collaboration between literary work writers and teachers in which the writers have created the literary works and the teachers have to discover or to establish the method o f literature teaching. Creative literature teaching method can be enlightened by applying reader resp onse strategy and making use of Facebook as a medium to respond the literary works. New criticism has been criticized as a separated appreciation approach. It is necessary to accept it in positive perspective that the elements of fiction of literary works cannot be analyzed one by one and part by part. In learning, literary works must be explored so that the essence of literature to humaniz e people can be fulfilled by teachers. Significant theories for life insisted by experts are assumed as " dry" theories and have not been maximally explored. Literary works contains essential components t hat can sharpen cognitive and affective aspects and that can develop language skills if the works are explored and appreciated by precise appreciation approach. This research-based paper elaborates the learning of literary appreciation by applying the effective strategy that is reader responses and the u se of face book as a medium for the learner to present and comment on their literary appreciation as a way of making use the social network in cyber.
